PRESIDENT CALLS FOR WAR DECLARATION, STRONGER NAVY, NEW ARMY OF 500,000 MEN, FULL CO-OPERATION FROM COLLEGE STUDENTS

W. Brandt to head LSUS

Experienced chancellor

Must become
U.S. citizen

Promises to

by Moore O. Less

Following on the heels of the surprise announcement of the resignation of Chancellor Didn't He Slip, a replacement has been named for the post, according to R.M. "Mickey" Mouse, member of the State Bored of Regents.

"We have decided to name Willy Brandt as new chancellor," Mouse squeaked timidly. "As most people realize, Herr Brandt is the former chancellor of West Germany. I feel that he is ready, willing and able to pilot LSUS to new horizons."

Any observer must admit that Brandt's credentials are most impressive. Brandt was chancellor of West Germany for many years, leading the country to supremacy over the United States in every aspect. Brandt is also a winner of the Nobel Peace Prize. He is a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Daughters of the American Revolution, Sons of the German Revolution, Sons of the German Revolution, First Cousins of the Tanzanian Revolution and Uncles of the Industrial Revolution.

But perhaps his greatest achievement is his noble handling of the terrorist uprising during the 1972 Summer Olympics in Munich. Brandt was personally responsible for killing the Commie slob terrorists; he knew no limit in bringing these hoodlums to justice — just ask the hostages.

"The choice for a new chancellor was difficult at first," Mouse whispered as he munched on a slice of Swiss cheese. "We had narrowed our choice down to three people: Brandt, Golda Meier, and Otto Von Passman. We pretty much counted Meier out when she joined an underground movement, and von Passman had a previous engagement in Monroe. Brandt was the only available candidate left."

Before Brandt can be sworn in, he must go through a few minor preliminary steps. "First, he must become a citizen of the United States," Mouse squealed as he switched to Velveeta. "After that he must sign a loyalty oath to the Bored of Regents. That should be no problem."

Brandt is expected to arrive sometime next week in his new piroque, a gift from Mouse. He will live in the new Fascist wing of the Caspiana House.

SAB picks destination

Travel to beautiful
Tehran, Iran

Rental guns available

by Calamity Jiles

Tehran, Iran, has been decided upon as the destination for the Silly Activities Board summer trip.

SAB President Brian Pumpnickel said the SAB has been planning the trip for two or three days. Some five places are now available to students at LSUS and their families.

Total cost of the trip is $7.95 per person. Students will be staying at the Imperial Jail because of the large number of vacancies made by the change in government.

Group activities will be provided, including several riots and an audience with the Ayatollah Khomeini. Many tours will be available to the group, including a visit to a firing squad's practice drill. Pumpnickel has agreed to be the practice target.

Individual activities will be available, such as budget rates on rental guns for those who wish to explore the city on their own.

Pumpnickel said, as he propped his foot on his desk, "We wanted to get something really new and different for the student body this year. With the way things are now, who knows when you will be able to see a religious government coup firsthand."

Pumpnickel also announced that the weekly SAB movies have been discontinued. Last week, during the showing of "Once is Plenty," the Shreveport vice squad raided the Symbionese Liberation Auditorium and confiscated the film. Charges are pending against Pumpnickel, who was responsible for ordering the film.

When questioned about the incident, Pumpnickel said, "I feel sure I will be exonerated of any wrongdoing. After all, I have friends. I know which side my bread is buttered on."

Plans for Spring Flunk are also underway. Pumpnickel had some personal thoughts to offer on this subject.

"Every Spring on the larger campuses, everybody flunks.

We want to establish the same kind of thing here since this campus is getting so big. The faculty has assured me they will fully cooperate in making Spring Flunk successful."

Pumpnickel also said that SAB had planned to have a big party at the end of Spring Flunk. The party was to be held at the new University Center, but it was moved to New Orleans.

He did say, however, that the party will be held in the LSUS parking lot. Two and one-half cases of cheap muscatel have been ordered for the occasion.

The local group, Z Train, will be joined with a local kazoo band to form a three-piece band performing music from Mozart to the Bee Gees.

Regents replace LSU-BR

with degrees

BATON ROUGE (API) — LSUS will become the state's primary degree-granting institution, a high source in the Louisiana Bored of Regents revealed yesterday.

The source, who insisted on remaining anonymous, said the decision to have LSUS replace LSU-Baton Rouge was reached at a secret meeting of political and educational leaders in a Bunkie cafe last week.

The growing militancy of Iranian students at LSU-Baton Rouge was cited by the source as the prime reason behind the decision.

At the luncheon in Bunkie, witnesses testified over steaming plates of hot boudin, that, as another high and usually reliable source put it, "no Iranian student in his right mind would ever want to move to Shreveport." Based on this assurance, the decision was made to abandon Baton Rouge.

Most buildings at LSU-BR will be dismantled, including the sorority houses, and placed on Mississippi River barges. The subsequent attempt to steam north to Shreveport will provide "an excellent opportunity to test the navigability of the Red River," another high, occasionally reliable source said.

About 242 bars from the LSU-BR area also are expected to join the trek to Shreveport, with most of them seeking locations along Youree Drive south of the campus. Truck convoys will be organized to transport the bars, another high, sometimes reliable source said, with a State Police escort providing protection north of Alexandria.

Zaps, an establishment near the Baton Rouge campus that is home on weekends to "3,000 crazed students," already has purchased two acres on Youree for Zaps II, an even higher source said. Menus and signs in Zaps II will be in English and French to cater to the 10,000 or more Cajuns expected to enroll at the new main campus. Absolutely no fried chicken will be served at Zaps.

A still higher source added that Shreveport, a "city on the grow," probably will become bilingual within a decade. To accommodate the great migration, gubernatorial candidate Raul Hardy has promised to use the National Guard to complete a four-lane highway from St. Martinville to Shreveport, the source said.

An 80,000-seat sports facility, the Tigerdome, will be built on the present site of the Caspiana House, with the Caspiana House being dismantled, moved to a more suitable location and rebuilt as a hot-dog stand to serve Tiger fans.

The Tigerdome will feature a special suite with wet bar reserved exclusively for staff members of the Daily Alma Street Joke and their friends, the highest source of all said.

Shuttle or not?

Opinions
differ

Should LSUS have a shuttle bus service? That was the question asked at the first annual Free Speech Alley, held at the steps of the University Center, Wednesday. The steps were all that was left, since the building was moved to New Orleans.

Most students agreed that a shuttle service would be very beneficial. One student, however, Silly Activities Board President Brian Pumpnickel, disagreed.

"I don't think that a shuttle bus service is very practical," Pumpnickel said. "Why, I haven't seen one shuttle since I came to LSUS. Rather than provide a bus for shuttles, let the students use the bus. After all, students at LSUS outnumber shuttles, 10-1 at least." Pumpnickel was later admitted into a political asylum.

Problem at University Center

On wrong
campus

Must be moved

What will happen

by Krispy Kritters

Architect Bilda Biggun announced that the new University Center has been built on the wrong campus. The center, he said, was supposed to have been built in New Orleans.

Biggun attributed the error to a printing mistake in the map of Louisiana. "I was given the map upside down. So, naturally, I thought New Orleans was in the north part of the state," he said.

Biggun, a Greek mythology major from Texas A & M, said the center will be moved by pickup to the new campus sometime next week.

LSUS students, who have awaited the center's opening for several years, will now miss out on the following:

— The new Grease Shack, which, sources say, promised to be "even greasier than before." A new distribution firm will supply a wider variety of food, including beer in two flavors: regular and menthol.

— The new odditorium, capable of accommodating more students than the current one, because it lacks chairs, curtains and wing space.

— A ballroom, complete with golf balls, bowling balls, basketballs and moth balls.

Students are protesting the center's move south. "Hey, lissen, we bin waitin' a hundred years for this thing," one said.

They claim to have a good case, arguing, "It was here first. Finders keepers."

If these arguments don't work," one student said, "we're going to petition Mayor U. Cannaford, asking him to change our city's name to New Orleans. That way the center will be in the correct city."

Graduating seniors who have not yet ordered their caps and gowns have missed the deadline. Therefore, they will not graduate, according to Fabian, campus registrar.

LINCOLN ASSASSINATION DISRUPTS THEATRE

Suicide
Study SetStudents
to do itVat party
as finale

by Calamity Jiles

Dr. J.A. Foul, director of Conspiracies and Inquests, announced recently that a three-week short course in the fundamentals of suicide will be offered beginning next week.

Dr. Foul said that the course is being offered because of the increasing interest expressed by students and members of the community. Recently, studies have indicated an increase in suicide rates among college-age people. The purpose of this course is to help students deal with this problem in the most pragmatic way possible.

Dr. Foul said, "We are working closely with Dr. George Unkempt and Dr. My Friend Flicka of the sickology department in order to make this offering different from your usual, run-of-the-mill lecture course. We believe students learn by doing; therefore we want to make this a personal experience for our students."

The course will explore the economic conditions and the effects urbanization is having on suicide rates. The legal aspects of suicide will also be given consideration. Students will learn which states prosecute those who attempt suicide and fail. This aspect of the course is included for those who are below-average students.

Dr. Foul said, "There are bound to be a few in any group who can screw up anything. We don't want them to be further frustrated by violating state laws."

Methods of committing suicide will be studied, as well as religious, ethical, and social attitudes.

The course is being offered on a no-credit basis. Successful students in this course won't need credit. A final project is required, however, and these projects will be presented at the final class meeting. (Very final!) For those surviving the final projects, a Jim Jones-style vat party will be held at the close of the class meeting. A $50 deposit will be required for course materials and, of course, body removal.

Nuclear Plant BuiltGas masks mandatory

by Bugsy Malone

After seeing "The Chernobyl Syndrome," in which a nuclear disaster occurred at a nuclear power plant, I must say that as a typical LSUS student concerned about my health, I am a bit skeptical about the nuclear plant they have just constructed next to the SLA as the result of another disaster last month in the form of a debate between Joe E. "Yea right" Deans and Dr. Arnold Marten, both of LSUS, and two scientists from General Electric, whose supporting arguments triggered the building of the plant.

This plant has created new and challenging problems for LSUS students, and if we want a future, we must meet these challenges successfully. One of the dangers we must deal with is that of nuclear radiation exposure, since the plant produces radioactive material. In case of an accident, it is possible for deadly radioactive gases to escape, causing death to persons in the area. So, as of the end of this week, all students will be required to wear gas masks while on the campus. That's right, gas masks. So don't hesitate any longer. Run now to the bookstore and buy a gas mask as the only hope for protection against radiation exposure. They come in the popular spring colors of pink and green and are made to fit all types of faces.

A second problem is that of waste disposal. All radioactive waste produced by the power plant must be disposed of in some way so that its radioactivity will not contaminate anything in the air, ground or water. The only sensible answer is to build a permanent, escape-proof repository. As an ultimate test of its safety, we will play a tape recording of a typical LSUS classroom lecture inside the repository. Surely the waste will try its best to escape.

Still another danger that exists is the uncontrollable production of nuclear weapons by Bombs 495 students, who are planning to take advantage of this nearby source of nuclear power. Moreover, it is feared that they will try to test their bombs in the area atmosphere. Last November, one student dropped his general-purpose, self-made bomb on Bossier City. For this reason, we are urging all available students to sign up in the Student Affairs Office as volunteers to help build an underground bomb shelter on campus, to be built under the ground.

The final danger to consider was in the news this past week. Five Eastern nuclear plants were shut down because of doubts as to their ability to withstand earthquakes. Though the probability of an earthquake in this area is small, it is still possible, and everything possible must be considered when dealing with nuclear power. So to test the ability of the LSUS nuclear power plant to withstand an earthquake, we have asked the girls in Alpha Pie to jump rope outside the plant. This should cause a minor quake. If nothing happens then the final test is to position a few dozen barrels of Coors beer outside the plant, and then tell Kappa Alpha it's theirs. This, of course, should cause a major quake and prove the strength of the plant.

On the other side of the coin, some, namely those who ordered it built, think of the power plant as part of LSUS' progress.

"LSUS is going all the way this time," grinned an unidentified LSUS authority. "Yes sir, it's progress or nothing — or maybe I should say nobody," he laughed.

GAAYs
Battle Conflict over juice sales

by Lasagna Turn-On

Should orange juice be sold in the new University Center? This has become an important question because of a protest movement activated by the LSUS chapter of Guys & Gals Against Anita You-Know Who (GAAY).

Dr. Renee Richards, GAAY national president who was summoned by the LSUS chapter to help with the orange juice problem, said that the protest is against a suggestion made to the Board of Disruption by STRAITS (Stop Those Rotten and Immorally Tactless Savages). The suggestion was that orange juice be the only beverage sold in the University Center.

Dr. Richards said STRAITS made the suggestion to annoy the GAAYs. "We're a much smaller group on this campus than they are," he said. "But we're big enough to stand up for what we believe in, or don't believe in."

He said that he attempted to negotiate with True-man Capone, president of STRAITS, by suggesting that another flavor be considered. "But that (censored) wouldn't even consider it, or any of my other suggestions."

"That's when I really became convinced that their suggestion was a malicious plot to ruin us and every principle we value," he said.

Dr. Richards said that the suggestion was made because STRAITS is aware of the GAAYs' controversy with Anita You-Know-Who, who advertises orange juice from Florida.

After the negotiation attempt, the club members decided that the only solution was to fight back, he said. "We're small in number; but we're tough. If they want a fight, that's what they're going to get."

To carry out the protest, the GAAYs have put up posters which carry slogans such as "The Florida Sunshine Tree Ain't For Me" and "The GAAY Way is OK." These posters can be seen at various places on campus.

The members are also circulating petitions among students against the sale of orange juice in the center. This effort is being accompanied by the distribution of handbills and pamphlets, which can be identified by the GAAY emblem, a purple pansy.

Dr. Richards said that, if necessary, the GAAYs also are prepared to disclose evidence gathered by special GAAY agents which suggests that certain members of STRAITS are not so "straight."

"Like I said, this thing may turn out to be dirty," he said. "But that's OK with us. I mean, what have we got to lose?"

Both groups have agreed to an exhibition to be held Monday at noon in the mall. The exhibition will present both sides to students.

The GAAYs' platform will be delivered by Ms. Les B. Anne, formerly John Smith, an LSUS student. Capone will deliver the STRAITS platform.

Terrorist
Students
Take OverProvenza
is hostage

by Calamity Jiles

Bronson Hall was occupied yesterday by a group of terrorist students.

The take-over began about 9 a.m. when elevators were stalled, phone lines cut and toilets overflowed.

The students have allegedly spent the semester in a terrorism seminar taught by the political science department. Seminar instructor, Dr. Normal Provenza, was taken hostage.

Negotiations with the terrorists have been underway since noon yesterday when a photo of Dr. Provenza was delivered to Chancellor Didn't He Slip's office, along with ransom demands.

Listed among those demands are private student lounges, gourmet food in the new University Center, elevator operators and Charmin' toilet paper in all campus restrooms.

Late yesterday, the terrorists granted an exclusive interview with members of the Alma Street Joke staff. The most obvious question asked was "Why?" One terrorist replied, "Because." Another added, "Have you ever sat through one of Provencar's lectures? Besides, I'm a KA, and we don't want no Yankees 'round here."

One female terrorist was asked if she turned to terrorism as a means of liberation. "Heck no," she replied. "Actually, I did it out of jealousy. After all, why should Patty Hearst get all the glory?"

The group was asked if they wanted political asylum. They replied that that was not their main concern, since they feel they are already in a political asylum here at LSUS.

The well-being of the hostage was also brought up. The terrorists did admit that they have had to deal harshly with Dr. Provosi.

"We've limited him to two packs of cigarettes an hour. For a three-carton-a-day smoker, that can really be cruel. He now sits for hours on end, aimlessly flicking his Bic. If our demands are not met by 3 p.m. today, we plan to excise his cigarette lighter from his hand and fling it on the steps of the Science Building. We mean business."

The final question concerned the terrorists group's future plans. The spokesman for the group said, "We feel assured our demands will be met. If they aren't, we plan to turn Provenza over to the Russians. After all, everybody knows he is a CIA operative. When this victory is over, most of us plan to attend the Yassar Arafat School of Terrorism in Bayroot, Lebanon."

RUSSIA INVADES GERMANY; GERMANY INVADES FRANCE, BUT DOES NOT DECLARE WAR; ENGLAND'S DECISION TODAY

SGA, SAB battle

Heavy casualties

by Joe E. Deanson

Antagonism between the Soporific Government Association and The Silly Activities Board erupted last week when SAB forces, led by fearless President Brian Pumpnickel, attacked the SGA offices. They were repulsed after suffering heavy casualties.

"We nearly had 'em," gasped Intramurals Director Tim Instead. "We were able to dodge most of the Flair pens and erasers they threw at us. But Brian caught a whole load of typewriter ribbons right in the chest and fell down and broke his hair. Somehow that just took the fight out of us."

SGA President Pits Dulling led the successful defense of the SGA offices. "This has been coming for a long time," he said. "Brian, Tim, and the rest of them just thought they had us cornered, but I guess we showed them," he said with a vicious gleam in his eye.

Dulling also had a different view of the turning point of the battle. "Really, I think the turning point was when we brought in air support," he said. "I mean, after all, how can you fight water balloons filled with india ink dropped from the sky?"

Dulling believes that he might have been mistaken in using nuclear weapons. "After all, the SGA is supposed to look out for the students' welfare. How is it going to look when everyone starts dying of fallout? But it's really the SAB's fault. They attacked us, you know!"

Despite the destruction caused by the battle, the SGA held its regular meeting Friday in the smoking rubble of Bronsongate, Room 131. Vice President Jean-Claude Kelly called the meeting to order, keeled over and died. President very temporary Teeth Whitebeard then took over.

Whitebeard recognized Senator T.R. "Sting" Ray who, oddly enough, recognized Whitebeard as well. Ray introduced a resolution which called on "the Senate of the Soporific Government Association of LSUS to solve any and all problems that may occur anywhere, anytime, for ever and ever." The resolution passed unanimously.

The meeting was adjourned quickly, as many Senators were dropping in the aisles from radiation sickness.

Sheep tunes

Members of the LSUS Biology Department are currently involved in a variety of semi-interesting projects.

Dr. Synch, a prominent plant-lover, has decided to branch out into a different field — the recording business. He will be recording an album that will contain his ever-popular sheep tunes.

The album, entitled "Sounds of the Pasture," will include such hits as "Ewe, You're the One" and "There Will Never Be Another Ewe." Be sure to look for this album at your local sheep shearing shop. It promises to be a musical experience you won't forget.

Another professor involved in a fascinating endeavor is Dr. Aquainski. He will be investigating the Cypress Lake Monster. The monster is thought to be related to Nessie of Lock Ness fame.

Messie of Cypress Lake has been known to attack biology professors. Therefore Dr. Aquainski plans to take with him an army of superior junior high students to help him subdue the beast. The children have been promised extra credit if they succeed. Dr. Aquainski hopes to keep his captured specimen in the fountain in the mall.

An interesting rumor floating around the department involves a yet unnamed professor who has been doing research on the effect of alcohol on birds. He has been using the South American tern in his research. According to one source, Dr. X plans to leave no tern unstoned and vice versa.

Censored

The final slide show at LSUS was siezed by a local judge Sunday as students jammed in to get a final look at sensational slides of Professor Gypsum's recent travels through ancient Europe's illiterate sites and jardins.

Gypsum said she was disappointed that so many students would watch. "It was more than a show; it was a spectacle."

Students who were not fortunate enough to have seen this presentation earlier missed what will undoubtedly be recorded as LSUS' first and last court-censored show.

Last week the judge began his vigorous campaign of "clean screen" for LSUS students, and Gypsum's slide show was just one of many films to fall.

All is not lost though. The judge's chambers have announced that the show can continue, providing Gypsum eliminate special slides depicting (censored). Students who saw the original show are asked not to reveal the (censored) slides.

Last Annual Mononucleosis Dance at Let's Park Mall from 7 p.m. until...?

Speaker

An unidentified guest speaker addressed a local organization on an undisclosed topic during a recent meeting held at an area restaurant.

Nearly everyone who attended thought the speaker was very interesting. One person said, "That speech really hit home. The topic was pertinent to the world situation today."

"I feel that everyone should have an opportunity to meet this man and hear his message. I haven't heard a speech that good since that other man talked to our organization."

Scarlett

After months of negotiating, the administration at LSUS has rejected a proposal by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios to film a new version of "Gone With the Wind" on the campus of LSUS.

The producers intended to use Caspiana House as the location for Tara and went on to point out that Shreve Square would be a perfect setting for the burning of Atlanta. The city could then apply to the federal government for urban renewal funds.

Rejection of the offer was assured when the Drama Club sponsors refused to lend their support to the project. Professor Fingerdodge, one of the three sponsors, stated, "I don't believe contact with those Hollywood types would be conducive to the type of educational experience we want our students to have."

Professor Jamison Pond, noted Elizabethan scholar, said, "This production would be trash; no decent drama has been written since the early 1600s." Asked for his opinion, Professor Earnest Lowered said, "Frankly, Scarlett, I don't give a damn."

Indications are that MGM is currently working on a deal with Centenary.

Editorial

In an unprecedented energy conservation move, LSUS administrators have announced a key rationing program directed toward faculty and staff personnel. The move was explained by Chancellor Slip as "a way to shut the door on energy waste." He added that "in the past faculty and staff were asked to cooperate on a voluntary basis."

"It just hasn't worked," the chancellor went on to explain. "Instead of hoped for 25 percent reduction in office hours, we have found faculty usage of their offices up an inexcusable 15 percent," he said.

According to the chancellor, "many faculty members have been abusing their privileges by working in their offices on weekends and evenings when they have no classes."

The chancellor explained that he took away all incentives that would lead to such behavior when we eliminated "teaching effectiveness" and "research activity" as criteria for pay-raises and promotions.

In explaining the key rationing program, Chancellor Slip predicted that there would be some problems. "I was strongly opposed to the idea of giving faculty and staff personnel keys to their offices in the first place," Slip pointed out. "Now we are faced with the unpopular task of taking the keys away," Slip continued.

Basically, the key rationing idea is a simple one. Faculty and staff with odd-numbered offices will be allowed to check out a key to their office on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Those faculty and staff in even-numbered rooms may check out keys on Tuesdays and Thursdays. In every month containing an "r" in its name, odd-numbered office keys will be given out on Tuesdays and Thursdays and even-numbered keys on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Keys may be checked out at the main desk in the library between the hours of 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Keys to the library will be available in the Bookstore at a purchase price of $8.95.

"Not only will restricted use of offices directly cut down on energy consumption, many indirect energy saving benefits should occur," according to Chancellor Slip.

"Keys are made out of steel and other alloys. It takes energy to produce such products. By cutting down on the number of keys available, we save energy."

In addition, "people cut themselves on keys frequently," according to Pen Kurdy of the LSUS HPE Department. "Some key accidents require visits to the doctor. By cutting down on such accidents, it is estimated that the faculty and staff alone at LSUS will use approximately 2.7 gallons less gasoline per year," Kurdy added.

Regarding the possibility of black market key rings developing, Chancellor Slip said, "While a possibility, it is highly unlikely." He went on to explain, "what good are keys when we take away their offices?"

HOME RUN RECORD FALLS AS RUTH HITS 60TH; PIRATES LOSE GIANTS OUT OF RACE

Dulling decides to retire

New coach appointed in quick move

by Hush-Puppy Lowe

Pits Dulling, long time coach of the Alpha Pie football team, announced last week in an emotional display that he is resigning as head coach of the women's intramural team to move up to the front office position of general manager.

Dulling, who led the Pies to three straight undefeated seasons, said that poor health and long hours were the reasons for the retirement. He also said that he was tired of taking the girls out after each win.

The offers for football's most prestigious job came from all over the country. Dulling and Intramural Director Tim Instead carefully studied all the requests and picked, to everyone's surprise, the nicest man in the world, Barky Hayes.

Hayes, the former coach from Ohio State University, before his forearm came in contact with an opposing player on the sideline, told the press conference that he was glad to have another chance to coach.

"I am looking forward to the opportunity to coach these girls," Hayes said with a smile. Hayes reassured everyone that he would never hit a girl, unless "she made a stupid mistake, like showing up late, miss a flag or drop a pass." He continued that he wasn't a disciplinarian and would not get upset at the slightest thing.

At spring practice the next day, reporters were amazed to see Jolly Cholly on the field assisting Hayes. Cholly, it was later learned, had broken the final year of his contract with LSU when he learned the Alpha Pie job came open.

Hayes and Cholly both agreed about how well practice had gone the first day when Hayes brought up a surprising subject. "When the new chancellor is sworn in, I will go to him with the proposal to rename the school OSU-S. This will give the school more tradition," Hayes said.

Cholly stepped in and said he had talked with the governor and wanted the name changed to just LSU. "By the way, you old fool," Cholly said, "This is Louisiana."

With that the two men ended up in a wild free-for-all that Campus Insecurity couldn't stop. Both men, and most of Campus Insecurity, ended up in the hospital. Dulling decided he missed taking the girls out after wins and decided to come back for another year as Coach of Alpha Pie.

Local nine decides time to change

Plans to play home games at LSUS site

by Moore O. Less

In a move to strengthen ties between LSUS and the Shreveport community, Shreveport Captain officials have announced that the local baseball team will play their home games at the soon-to-be-erected Didn't He Slip Memorial Field on the LSUS campus.

"We feel that the LSUS campus provides an excellent spot to house the Captains," said club President U.R. Out. "Not only will we move out of the slum-ridden area where we play now, but we will move closer to the rich citizens of Shreveport!"

Only minor renovations will be needed to make the current field playable for minor league ball. No outfield fence is needed, since nobody on the team hit a home run last year. And the current seating capacity of 50 will be quite sufficient for the crowds that have come to watch the Captains in the past. "We'll use any extra seating for dugouts," Out remarked.

Spearheading the renovation procedures will be George Came-Back, chief of the physical fitness plant. De-weeding the infield, knocking down the anthills in the outfield and putting up a million-dollar scoreboard head his list of priorities.

Prospects are good for this year's edition of the Captains. The bulwark of the pitching staff is Stump McGraw, a one-armed southpaw from upper Manhattan. He pitched for the Bunkie Bunkers of the All-American Association last year, compiling an 0-28 record.

Other pitchers include Havva Homer, from the Dominican Republic; Spiffy Spitball, a pitcher with a good fastball but a horrible handshake; and Mark "the Bird Brain" Friedfish, who is recuperating from brain surgery.

Power hitting has always been a question mark for the Captains. General manager Jerry Atricks thinks he has come up with a player with tremendous power. Bull Moose, a former truck driver and bouncer for the Grease Shack, has the ability to hit the long ball; if he doesn't he may kill the opposing pitcher.

Burglary

Members of DOM (dirty old men) fraternity were shocked to discover that the Freedom Tree they had planted earlier in the semester was stolen by a slave ship and taken to Africa.

"Trees are in big demand in Africa right now," according to Dental Floss, former member of the organization. "As a matter of fact, I have just finished a short, 30-page report for my broadcasting class, entitled, 'The Diminishing African Oak.'"

Members are currently planning to recapture the tree and return it to its rightful hole. The group will leave by piroque down the Red River tomorrow at noon. Dr. F.R. Greene, a local tree surgeon, will accompany the fraternity as an advisor.
